

PageKeeper

How many books have you actually read this year?

PageKeeper tracks what you're reading — title, author, printed page range — and how far you've gotten. Log pages as you go, finish a book and it moves to your shelf, and PageKeeper rolls it all up into the numbers you actually want to know: books this year, pages this year, and how fast you read. A home-screen widget keeps your current book one tap away.

1. Add Your Books

1. Tap the + button in the top-right corner.
2. Enter the title, author, and the printed first and last page numbers — many stories start on page 7 or 21, and progress counts from wherever yours begins. Then pick a genre and an icon.
3. Choose Reading Now to start immediately, To Be Read to park it on your TBR list, or Finished to backfill a book you read before getting the app — enter its start and finish dates and it counts toward that year's stats.
4. Optionally snap a photo of the cover (or pick one from your library) — it shows on your shelf and the book's page, and PageKeeper offers colors sampled from it.
5. Tap Save. Reading-now books appear under Currently Reading, starting today.

Already partway through? Before saving, flip on "I've already started" and enter your start date and the printed page you're on. Progress starts from there instead of zero.

When you're ready for a To-Be-Read book, tap its play button (in the list or on the book's page) and it moves to Currently Reading — the clock starts that day. To edit a book later, open it and tap Edit. To remove one, swipe left on it in the list.

2. Log Pages as You Read

Keep your progress current with a tap:

- From the book — type the page you're on and PageKeeper works out how many you read, or enter the page count directly.
- From the widget — tap the + button to log pages without opening the app (set the amount in Edit Widget), or tap the widget itself to jump to the book.
- Finished it? — open the book and tap Finished This Book; it moves to your Finished shelf, counted toward this year's total.
- Finished by accident? — open the book and tap Move Back to Reading; it returns to Currently Reading with your page restored.

Reaching the last page automatically marks a book finished, even if you logged the pages in one big jump.

3. Put It on Your Home Screen

1. Long-press your home screen, tap Edit → Add Widget, and pick PageKeeper.
2. Long-press the widget → Edit Widget to choose which book it shows and how many pages each tap of the + button logs (10 unless you change it).
3. Tap the + button to log your pages-per-tap in place — or tap anywhere else on the widget to jump straight to that book in the app for a precise page entry.

Tip: The medium and large widget sizes show progress on several books at once, so you can track more than one at a time.

4. Reading Stats — Pro

Open Settings → Reading Stats to see this year (or any past year) at a glance:

- Books read and pages read — the headline numbers for the year.
- Pages per day / per month — your real average, not your guess.
- Books per month — how your reading habit trends over the year.
- Reading speed — your average pace across every book you've finished.
- Genres — your favorite genre and the year's breakdown, like "Fantasy · 5 books · 42%".
- Authors — your favorite author and who you've read the most of.
- Fastest read — the book you tore through quickest, by pages per day.
- Milestones — badges at 1,000 pages, 2,000, 5,000, 10,000 and well beyond, counted across every year you've tracked.
- Books goal — set a books-for-the-year target and watch the progress bar fill as you finish; the current year's bar also sits at the top of your shelf.

Free vs Pro

PageKeeper is free to use forever with one book being read at a time — your To Be Read list and Finished shelf are always unlimited. A single one-time purchase — PageKeeper Pro, $2.99, no subscription — unlocks everything else.

Frequently Asked Questions

I logged the wrong number of pages. Can I fix it?

Swipe left on the entry in the book's History section to remove it — the page count rewinds — or edit the book and set the exact page directly.

The widget shows the wrong book.

Long-press the widget → Edit Widget and pick the book you want. Each widget can show a different one, so add one per book you're actively reading.

Can I add a book I've already started?

Yes — when adding a book, turn on "I've already started" and enter your start date and the printed page you're on. Your stats count from that starting point.

Can I add books I finished before getting the app?

Yes — choose "Finished" when adding a book and enter its start and finish dates. It lands on your Finished shelf and counts toward that year's stats, so a mid-year start doesn't shortchange your numbers.

What happens to a finished book?

It moves to your Finished shelf and counts toward that year's books-read and pages-read totals, based on its finish date.

What does the free tier limit?

Free readers have one book going at a time — the To Be Read list and Finished shelf are unlimited. Pro removes the one-at-a-time limit.

Does PageKeeper need an account or internet?

No. Everything lives on your device — no sign-up, no tracking, nothing leaves your phone.

Is Pro a subscription?

No — Pro is a single one-time purchase. Buy it once and it's yours forever.
